

[Outline of Research and Technique]

To easily understand the functional phenomena occurring in complicated reaction in living cell, synthetic polymers with simple structures are used as model of biopolymers. The result of obtaining is applied to the development of the material such as the fields of biomedical devices and environmental pollution control techniques.

